Central to our strategy is strengthening our linkages with industry. We will pivot towards work-based skills training and immersive learning experiences that bridge the gap between the classroom and the workplace. Our programs aim to deliver meaningful economic outcomes by rigorous career guidance and placement, creating pathways for overseas employment, and fostering an entrepreneurial mindset that empowers our trainees to become job creators themselves.

Through collaborative efforts, we can unlock the potential of our youth, enabling them to become job creators and contributors to the economy. I'm eager to work with you, to take PVTC forward and empowering the next generation of skilled professionals and entrepreneurs.

OUR CITIES - OUR PRIDE

DISTRICT MIANWALI

The name Mianwali literally means “Land of the Mian.” According to local tradition, it is derived from a Sufi saint, Shaikh Mian Ali, who migrated from Baghdad and settled in the area in the 16th century. Over time, the hamlet around his settlement came to be known as Mianwali. The district itself shows evidence of very ancient habitation, having been part of the regions influenced by the Indus Valley Civilization. Over the centuries, it came under the rule of various empires and invaders, including the Ghaznavids under Sultan Mahmud Ghaznavi, followed by the Delhi Sultanate, the Mughals, later the Sikhs, and eventually the British Raj. Mianwali’s geographical position enhances its significance. It borders Khyber Pakhtunkhwa to the north and lies at the crossroads of Punjab’s agricultural heartland and the resource-rich tribal belt.

The district is connected to major cities like Rawalpindi, Sargodha, and Dera Ismail Khan, making it a vital transit point. Its landscape is diverse, ranging from fertile plains near the Indus River to the rugged Salt Range, offering opportunities for agriculture, mining, and energy development.

Namal University, Mianwali

According to the 2023 census, Mianwali hosts a population of 1.79 million across 296,339 households. The gender ratio stands at 104.32 males per 100 females. The literacy rate is 62.87% below average literacy rate of Punjab, with a notable gender gap: 77.58% for males and 47.63% for females. Approximately 25.31% of the population is under 10 years, and 20.21% resides in urban areas.

Nearly 40–45% of the population falls within this productive age bracket of 15 to 40 years, translating to over 700,000 individuals, with a fairly balanced gender distribution. Economically, Mianwali is a blend of agriculture, mining, and emerging industries. The district is well known for the

RESCUE 1122 Session at Mianwali

Chashma Nuclear Power Complex and cement factories, which contribute significantly to the national grid and construction sector. Agriculture remains the backbone of the local economy, with wheat, sugarcane, and citrus fruits being major crops. The services sector, particularly trade, transport, and education, is expanding, but industrial diversification remains limited.

This economic profile underscores the importance of skill-based training to prepare the youth for jobs in energy, construction, agriculture technology, IT, and services sectors. Without vocational support, the district’s youth risk being underemployed or forced into low-paying, informal jobs. Given the youth population, literacy gap, and economic potential, vocational training is not just desirable but essential for Mianwali. Skill development in renewable energy, construction, mechanical trades, ICT, and services can create pathways to sustainable employment, poverty reduction, and women’s empowerment. Linking informal skills with formal certification, particularly for women

THE TWO SEEDS

One spring morning, two seeds lay side by side in fertile soil. Both were destined to grow, but their choices defined their futures. The first seed whispered, "I want to push my roots deep into the earth, drink water, and feel the sun on my leaves. I want to grow tall and give shade, fruits, and flowers. I am ready for the risk." With that courage, it began its journey. Through the dark soil, it pushed roots downward and a small shoot upward. Slowly, it grew into a strong plant.

The second seed, however, hesitated. It thought, "What if my roots go too deep and I cannot breathe? What if the wind breaks my stem, or animals eat my leaves? It's safer to stay here, hidden." Out of fear, it chose not to grow. Days passed, and while the first seed blossomed into a tree admired by many, the second remained buried, unseen and forgotten.

Life is full of choices. Like the seeds, we can either embrace growth with courage or remain stagnant in fear. Growth comes with challenges, but it also brings purpose, strength, and fulfillment.

Moral: Fear keeps us buried, but courage allows us to bloom. Take the risk to grow — for within every challenge lies the opportunity to shine.
